What Are Combined Products?

MPP's definition of combined products encompasses a broad variety of products

A combined product as considered by the MPP is any product that combines aspects of drugs and devices or diagnostics or a software providing an integral solution with a medical purpose. By these means, the concept and potential of combined products goes well beyond the traditional definition of integral combination products.

Our Mission

MPP actively engages with key stakeholders and decision-makers supporting the shaping of a proportionate regulatory framework for combined products in Europe

- To improve access to innovative products
- To better match patients' needs

Our Activities

1. Stakeholder Dialogue

We actively engage with stakeholders and key policy decision-makers at European Union and Swiss level. We closely cooperate with other associations on related topics.

2. Working Groups

We develop and publish comprehensive White Papers and Points to Consider related to combined products.

3. MPP Annual Conference

Our Annual Conference provides a platform for an intersectoral exchange of knowledge and expertise as well as an excellent opportunity for stakeholder interaction.

4. Certified Training Courses

We perform specialized training courses providing comprehensive insights on latest regulatory and legislative developments related to combined products, medicinal products, medical devices, and in vitro diagnostics.
